Today's gospel starts with a picture of the world into which John the Baptist announces the coming of Christ. He appears preaching a "baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins." He quotes the prophet Isaiah to announce that "all humankind shall see the salvation of God." It is not only religious people who will be affected by the one John is preparing us for; but the created order itself will be transformed – paths, valleys, mountains and hills.

In his preaching to us John calls us to repentance, a change to our ways of thinking and acting. What needs to be cleared away to let God enter more deeply into our lives? Baruch and John the Baptist announced that God is coming to set things in right order. In our lives and world there are too many valleys of despair that need to be filled; mountains and hills of pride that need to be made low; winding roads of confusion that need straightening and rough, violent ways that must be made smooth. We cannot do this on our own. Putting things right is first God's work in Jesus Christ.

Repentance is not something we do on our own. Repentance is something God does for us as he works in our hearts with the message of the law that shows our sins. Through His Word, God leads us to realize our sins. Through His Word, God leads us to feel sorry for our sins. Through His Word, God leads us to confess our sins. Through His Word, God assures us that our sins are forgiven in Jesus. Forgiveness is something God does for us as he works in our hearts with the message of the gospel that shows our Saviour.

Paul reminds us that God has begun that good work in us. The way has been smoothed, so we can now respond in love. We are recipients of the work of salvation that "comes through Jesus Christ for the glory and praise of God."
