THE DIRECT LINE I

*Prayer could be defined as communication between us and God,
yet there are different ways of doing this ...*

Since the Bible is God's Word, and a record of his interaction with us, we would expect to see examples of prayer in its text, and we would not be disappointed.

The Church teaches us that there are four basic types of prayer: praise, intercession, thanksgiving and contrition. All four are found in our biblical texts.

There is praise of God. This is found in the Psalms which speak of God's greatness and his goodness, as well as in texts such as the Magnificat and the hymns found in St Paul's letters that speak of the mystery of God's mercy and love. Praise is most unselfish form of prayer, for we are not asking anything from God. We are simply recognizing God's greatness and goodness and proclaiming it to the world.

The Bible is full of intercession. Among the many scenes which show this are the prayers of Judith and Esther as they seek to save their people from the danger which they faced.

A good example of thanksgiving is the scene in which one leper out of ten who were healed return to thank Jesus for the miracle that they had received. The fact that only one returned is unfortunately an example of what we sometimes do—we can easily forget to thank God for the many ways in which we are blessed throughout the day. There is also an extensive thanksgiving at the beginning of St Paul's First Letter to the Thessalonians. Paul put it there for a dual purpose: to thank God, and to remind the Thessalonians that all of their successes were a gift from God and not due to their own efforts.

Finally, there are many examples of contrition in the Bible. There are prayers of contrition for one's own fault (such as King David's and King Hezekiah's admission of having sinned) and also for the sins of the nation (such as when the prophets ask for a remission of the punishment due to the nation on account of their sinfulness)

St Paul reminds the communities to which he writes that we should pray constantly. Sometimes we do that in formal prayer (such as the Our Father or the Hail Mary), and sometimes we do it informally (simply remembering that God is present and kind). The actual form of the prayer is much less important than the fact that we are praying.

Jesus also reminds his listeners that we should be insistent when we pray. He tells the parable of the widow who demanded her rights from an evil judge (Luke 18:1-8). The judge eventually gave in to her pleas because he was tired of listening to her voice. There are times when we should let our prayers storm the heavens.

Yet, Jesus also reminds us that we should not multiply our prayers. That lesson seems to contradict what has just been said, but it does not. Jesus is warning against using prayer as a formula that we repeat over and over again, thinking that we are multiplying its effect by continually repeating it. That is magical thinking. The difference between prayer and magic is that prayer is an act of surrender to the will of God while magic is an act by which we try to control the other.

MEDITATION

What the Church is on a large scale, the family is on a small scale: an image of God’s love in human fellowship. Indeed, every marriage is perfected in openness to others, to the children that God sends, in mutual acceptance, in hospitality and being for others.

Nothing in the early Church fascinated people more about the “New Way” of the Christians than their “domestic churches”. Often someone “believed in the Lord, together with all his household; and many ... believed and were baptized. In an unbelieving world, islands of living faith were formed, places of prayer, mutual sharing, and cordial hospitality. Rome, Corinth, Antioch, the great cities of antiquity, were soon permeated with domestic churches that were like points of light. Even today families in which Christ is at home are the leaven that renews our society. YOUCAT n271
